 FRANKIE	Once an aspiring writer, Frankie was bitten while he was reading War and Peace on a weekend excursion to the mountains. He got the glass stuck in his head when he wrecked his jeep and went flying out of the front-shield window. He can still be sighted carrying his copy of Tolstoy's classic, though most of the pages have been burnt and chewed out.	-Aside from having a penchant for human brains, Frankie still possesses many of his higher faculties. As such, he loves literature, classical music, coffee and cheese. Frankie doesn't care much for sports. He also doesn't like fire and cars because they bring back bad memories of his accident. He wants to write again, but he is unable to hold his pencil right.	Frankie is not a very "good" zombie. He still sympathizes with humans and there is still a strong trace of who Frankie used to be. Frankie has been known to come to the rescue of people in danger. He is constantly fighting his instinctual cravings for human flesh with his respect for human life. It's an uncomfortable balancing act which puts Frankie in many bad situations.
 LASZLO	Lazlo had just signed his contract to play football for the Oakland Raiders when a swarm of zombies burst into his press conference and made a mess of the place. Lazlo is aggressive and faster than most zombies. He carries strong resentment for having his dreams of playing professional football dashed. He is easily distracted by sports reels of any kind. His purple color is the byproduct of a blend of sports "supplements" he continues to take.	-Lazlo loves sports. Anything that involves any kind of athleticism is pure ecstasy to him. He possesses an Olympian spirit about himself. He loves food with a high-protein content to keep his muscles healthy and in shape. He can often be seen trying to work his quads by climbing up and down the long stairs at the abandoned stadium.	Lazlo is a brute. He is stronger and faster than most zombies. But he loses all focus around sports or exercise equipment. He really has a heart of gold and will take a liking to anyone who also likes sports. He is a good friend to have around, especially if there are other lesser-zombies nearby. He will come to the defense of any friend. He is as brave as a lion.

 HAROLD	Harold is lazy as hell but he loves to eat. That's actually how he became a zombie. He was standing in line for a sub-sandwich when a group of zombies attacked the city. Rather than running for the hills like all the other sane people, Harold took the kitchen to finish making the sandwich he ordered. Right when he was ready to take the first bite of his awesome sandwich, a zombie came at him from behind and took a bite of him! His orange color comes from the countless bags of Cheetos he is constantly devouring.	There are zombies and then there is Harold. A veritable sloth in every other pursuit, Harold will wander the streets for days without rest looking for something to eat. He loves all food and doesn't care if it is rotten or not. He especially likes pizza and hotdogs and chips and anything salty he can get his hands on. Usually the first to find a human survivor on the streets, he doesn't care much for the taste of human flesh, which is lucky for you.	Harold is driven by one thing and one thing alone: to find the long lost sandwich he was never able to eat. At first seeming like an unreliable friend, Harold is merely distracted by the longing in his heart to recapture that moment right before he bit into that sub-sandwich which was stolen from him. Easily distracted by foods, he loves to have conversations about it.
